Some of What The NAACF Has Learned

The NAACF personally interviewed a multitude of business owners face to face to determine what is really going on within their own industry. There was no hidden agenda, and all the interviews were confidential and designed to give us an accurate picture of each industry.

- On average, most business owners believe 73% of the work being done in their industry is not of the highest quality.
- Eighty-one percent of the business owners believe that the public is being intentionally or unintentionally misled during the sales process.
- Almost 100% of the business owners in every industry believe that asking for a price quote over the phone is doing a disservice to the ethical businesses in their industry and the prices quoted over the phone are mostly “low ball” prices anyway.

What is the NAACF doing to help consumers?

We at the NAACF feel what we are doing is very important. We realize that relying on consumers to do the research and educate themselves on how to select good businesses is not working. There is more information available than ever before, yet complaints about unethical business practices keep skyrocketing.

Our local fraud specialists have met with, and interviewed, thousands of businesses in Raleigh, North Carolina and Central Florida. The NAACF has also interviewed consumers to determine what they look for when selecting a business, what they are thinking throughout the selection process, and what questions they fail to ask or never thought to ask a business when trying to earn their trust. Our goal is to provide a valuable service to consumers and ethical businesses that are tired of seeing unethical businesses profit off of the good citizens of their community.

For Consumers Looking To Select A Business

For each industry that we have researched, we have provided a simple effective list of what to look for, questions to ask and what to avoid when interviewing and selecting prospective businesses in each industry. The information was provided to the NAACF by caring business owners we interviewed in each industry. The information we compiled is an excellent tool for you to utilize when selecting a business to provide a product or service you need. We will continually up-date our consumer information list as we continue to interview more and more businesses across the country. Next to our information list on each industry will be a business we selected for that industry and market. Every business selected by the National Association Against Consumer Fraud has passed our background check and agreed to adhere to our code of ethics. We appreciate their efforts and hope you will consider them when selecting a business. Our selected businesses will provide you more information on our valuable program when they meet you.
